Drive the abuse off Europe's roads

It's time to end the long-distance transportation of horses to slaughter

Exhausted, stressed, diseased, injured and travelling for days across thousands of miles: these horses are desperate for food, water and rest.

80,000 horses needlessly suffer as they are transported long distances across Europe to slaughter each year. To end the torment caused by these relentless journeys, the European Commission must introduce a maximum journey limit of 9 to 12 hours.

Please show your support as an MEP by bringing this card to World Horse Welfare's stand in the European Parliament from 10th to 14th of October, where they will be making the case for change as they hand over the latest Dossier of Evidence to the European Commission.
